

IN ORDER TO WAKE UP YOU MUST FIRST BE DISTURBED

By Tim Farrow

I just finished David Icke's Book, Alice In Wonderland and the World Trade Center Disaster, Why the Official Story of 911 is a Monumental Lie. This book is a must read for all lovers of freedom. I knew immediately after 911 that we were not being told the truth about what happened. I intuitively knew that this was just another, well orchestrated assault on our freedom.

When I have the chance I like to discuss this material. It is truly amazing the response I get when I verbalize my opinion that our leaders not only allowed this to happen but caused it. In my conversations with people about 911 and telling them that it was all planned and executed by "our" government. I have seen several interesting responses, which range all the way from "I knew something was wrong with the official story", to "You #@&% conspiracy theorists are ruining this country". The response that has intrigued me the most is: "Dude, don't tell me this, I don't need to know this stuff". For every person I've talked to who is open to an alternative view, I meet ten who are not. We shut out what scares us. Another interesting reaction is: "How can you believe such a thing about our leaders?" Don't take my word for it. Read David Icke's book. He doesn't ask you to believe anything he says, and it is all extremely well researched and documented. He identifies most of his sources. All he asks of you as a reader is to come with an open mind.

Adolf Hitler said "The masses indulge in petty falsehoods everyday, but it would never come into their heads to fabricate colossal untruths and they are not able to believe in the possibility of such monstrous effrontery the bigger the lie, therefore, the more likely it is to be believed. Even the most insolent lie always leaves traces behind it, even after it has been nailed down." George W. Bush in his speech after 911, admonished us not to indulge or even tolerate "conspiracy theories". Wonder why?

Micheal Moore, in his movie, "Fahrenheit 911", has a very entertaining segment of George W. Bush being told of the second tower being hit, in which he shows no emotion. His expression doesn't even change! He goes on listening to a story told by some third graders at a school he is visiting at the time. For long minutes he sits doing nothing. I saw this movie in a theater when it first came out. Virtually everyone was laughing at this part. Read the book. See the movie. And tell me this guy didn't know what was being perpetrated.

A common reaction people have to hearing this information is often "this is outrageous". Outrageous – yes. Possible? You decide. We must begin to educate ourselves about what is really going on. Fear is the tool they use to manipulate us. Without our fear we cannot be manipulated. How, you may ask, can I not be afraid – especially if I believe there is a conspiracy? There is only one way that I know of to banish fear from our hearts. We must love ourselves enough to be open. We must trust our intuition. It's no good pushing the fear down. Like any addiction it would only push back. Open to the love and the fear falls away. This is your native state emerging.

Many people are afraid to think that people in power could be so ruthless. But it is precisely our fears that allow us to be manipulated. Let me explain. There are two forces in the universe from which all of our emotions are derived, love and fear. These two forces, like light and darkness, do not coexist. Where there is love, there can be no fear, where there is fear there can be no love.

Why would folks be angry with me for suggesting that they have been told such a incredible lie? Anger is a fear-derived emotion. It makes them angry to hear that they've been duped. I'm not suggesting however, that most of them actually believe me. But I think at some level this strikes a chord of truth in them. How could it not? There are so many inconsistencies and unanswered questions around all of this. My purpose here is to reflect on the fear and anger that my fellow victims feel. Fear is a paralyzing force. When we are in the throes of fear, we do not think clearly. We tend to act from the reptilian brain, also know as the limbic system, which is concerned with survival. What we need here is creative, rational thought, and open eyes and hearts. It is vital that we get to the truth because we are under attack, not by those we are told are attacking us, but by those who seek to strip us of our basic freedoms.

The Homeland Securities Act, and the Patriot Act take away most of our civil rights in the name of safety. Dick Cheney has been quoted as saying that this open ended "war on terror may not be over in our lifetimes". Like the war on drugs it cannot be won. Watch and see—if we start demanding an end to this madness we will be hit with another "terrorist attack" to keep us in fear. Franklin Roosevelt once said, "We have nothing to fear but fear itself." Precisely. We need some mental Viagra! We must have the courage to look deeper at what we are being told. You simply can't have an honest opinion or a belief system if you don't hear both sides. If you only get your information from the mainstream media, you do not have enough information to make an informed choice. Everyone knows how they "spin" the news stories to appease or scare us. If you don't know it intellectually – you know it intuitively. I'll bet if you give the other side of "reality" a chance, it will ring true. Don't be afraid. We can fix this. The momentum may seem to be on their side, but we are them. Be brave. It's not out of our hands–yet.

We are conditioned to strive and push for the things we want. Sometimes the best way is just to have your hands out to receive. The universe and your soul want you to have your needs met. Often the best thing to do is to get out of your own way and let it happen. This is certainly true of allowing more love into your being. By so doing you help save the world.

It is truly amazing, the degree to which we influence each other on a non-verbal, telepathic level. Mahatma Ghandi said, "What you do may seem unimportant, but it is most important that you do it". As you evolve your own consciousness you help everyone evolve. We feel out of control at times. This is an illusion. We are free agents. Our choices are our reality. Let's choose love. By so doing, fear will vanish, and we will not be under anyone's control. Let's turn the tide that erodes our freedom before it's too late.
